XAVIER EECKHOUT

François POMPON (Saulieu 1855 - Paris 1933)

Duck

Plaster, signed 'POMPON' on the base

Dedicated and dated 'a m. Pierre Chabrol / 28 mars 1923'

H. 19,5; L. 15,5; P. 11,5 cm.

Pompon's account books, reproduced on page 118 of the above-mentioned catalogue raisonné, indicate that a small plaster duck was sold for 300 francs on 28 March 1923 to Pierre Chabrol, 16 boulevard Carnot in Limoges.

Related Works:

The same model dedicated and dated, edited in bronze by Valsuani;

An another exemplar in bronze preserved at the Musée d'Orsay under the inventory number RF 3270.

Literature

C. Chevillot, L. Colas, A. Pingeot, François Pompon 1855-1933, ed. Gallimard / Electa-RMN, 1994, Paris, p. 118 et p. 181, n. 8B, repr.

Artist description:

Ten years before his death, Pompon created two of his most emblematic artworks, the White Bear in 1922 and the Black Panther in 1925. Made of stone, its uniqueness rises it to the echelon of a quality museum piece.

Its prestigious provenance gives its exceptional character. Bought by the collector Jacques André in 1928 at the Salon des Tuileries from François Pompon himself, it has been kept in the family until now. Painted by Bernard Boutet de Monvel, patron of Gustave Miklos, Jacques André (1882-1970) was passioned by the art of his time, he was not very well known by the public but he was very important at that time.

There is a lot of literature on this artwork, which Pompon mentions in the accounts books. It was sold in 1928 for the amount of 7 000 ancient francs.

Modelling his animals with an important economy of graphic resources and sobriety of the shapes, Pompon explained: «I keep many details intended to disappear. I create the animal with almost all its frills. Otherwise, I am losing myself. And then, little by little, I erase in order to keep only what is essential». The sculptor syntheses the appearance of the animal so that he can express its very essence. His rendering of the movement, learnt from Rodin, consists in the combination of several gestures to concentrate the expression. His panther moves forward, motionless, surrounded by an unfinished line.

At the dawn of the XX century, Pompon managed to find an alternative to the Cubism's deconstruction, « the sculpture without any hole or shade », as he liked to say, building a work with full shape, rounded outlines, refusing geometric and favouring traditional materials.